Private Instruction

Private instruction is sometimes necessary for dogs with specific behavior problems such as biting, jumping, chewing, digging, begging at the table, stealing food from countertops, aggression or fear disorders, etc. It may also be necessary for anti-social dogs who are a potential threat to other dogs and, in some cases, anti-social dogs who are scared of other dogs may need to complete a training program in private sessions to be successful. Additionally, many problem behaviors are often induced by an outside stimulus (meaning they occur only in specific places or areas, under certain circumstances, and/or in the presence of certain people). As a rule, these behaviors are more effectively addressed at home or under carefully orchestrated conditions and without the presence of the distraction (dogs, people, noise, etc.).

One on one training sessions provide clients a flexible solution to reconciling their demanding schedules with their training goals. Additionally, there are times when a dog could benefit from a few private behavior sessions prior to being successful in a group learning situation. Whatever your needs, we offer private instruction for both behavior problems or obedience instruction billed in one-hour sessions, which can be completed at your place...or ours! Call us at 208.841.5532 to schedule your private training session!
